Lawrence Moses

Head Golf Professional

Clifton Park Golf Course

Unlike other golf professionals, Lawrence did not grow up with a golfing pedigree. Instead, his childhood was spent on a cattle farm owned by his family. The daily labors of farm life helped him develop a strong work ethic, while also promoting a love for things that were creative and athletic.

As a youth, Lawrence discovered a love for theatre and performing. This new passion was supported by his family and was incredibly rewarding. With a full scholarship to study acting, Lawrence became the first in his family to attend college. Four years later, with a degree in his pocket, Lawrence set off into the world to expand his knowledge.

Before too long he reflected on the joys of playing golf with his father, and Lawrence decided that the golf business might be a place for him. He was given the chance as the Assistant Golf Professional at Clifton Park. This fortunate opportunity became the canvas where he could make his mark. Over the next decade Lawrence developed tournaments, leagues, and junior clinics for the Baltimore community. His dedication was rewarded when he was offered a Head Golf Professional opportunity.

In 2019 Lawrence turned a game into a career when he became a member of the PGA of America. This afforded him the opportunity to advance the experiences of golfers in this area. Lawrence has always been focused on the enjoyment of others. His creativity, work ethic, and passion are now focused on the experiences of his golfing sisters and brothers.
